President in 10th Year

President of the United States and Commander in Chief of all United States Armed Forces, Franklin Delano Roosevelt last month began his tenth year in the White House since he took office in 1933. Roosevelt's ability to remain calm in the face of great trials, said the president's physician, "nine years in the White House have left most men." (New York Times Photo.)

Red Cross Play Halls Open Soon

By Pvt. Ford Kennedy

The first Red Cross recreation centers for American forces in Northern Ireland will be opened within 60 days, J. S. Donovan, field director, has announced.

Two centers, one at Belfast and the other at Londonderry, will be among the first ready to receive soldiers. These will be located in buildings already available and will provide typical showers and meals for soldiers.

Present plans indicate that a choice of hot or cold showers will be made for the soldier's hygiene, a shower and breakfast.

Soldiers on pass or furlough will be admitted to these and other recreation centers to be opened within the next several months.

The Plaza, which was Belfast's main shopping district and commercial center until it was destroyed early in the war year, has been leased, even by the Red Cross, and set up.

U.S. Winning In the Battle of Production

(Reprinted from The Magazine)

Something is happening that Adolf Hitler does not yet understand—a new re-orientation of the old American miracle of wheels and machinery, but on a new scale.

This time it is a miracle of war production, and it is more than a miracle. It is, in fact, too big to be described. It can only be understood by taking a sample.

There is no better sample than Henry Ford. For years ago he was an earnest pacifist who refused to take a vote for peace against the British.

Today, like the rest of industry, he is not only working for war, but for the war alone, and working as he never worked before.

A generation ago he performed the first miracle of mass production.

Today he is only one of many miracle-workers in his industry, but his heart is in their common job to build greater things for the world he never did before.

These things are not exaggerations, but the truth about Detroit today is not easy to believe.

A year ago Willow Run was a tiny little town west of Detroit, surrounded by woods, a few barnhouses, a few country schools. Today Willow Run is the most important town in the history of man. More than a million cars, nearly a quarter of a million more, are being produced here.

In this great room stands the heart of modern machinery and the heart of modern man. The man can see from one end to the other.

The first engine 35000 tons of aluminum alloy, by summer 1942 men will work in this room; by December 1942.

In planning the building, Ford Motor Company's drafting room used five miles of blueprints, later a day, seven days a week, for six months.

In this enormous workshop Ford men constantly to turn out a four-motored Consolidated bomber every hour. The new machine will fly to all one end, from the other will emerge the bomber machine, complete with life. The bombers will be born from half-mile assembly lines so fast that Ford will not try to slow them.

The final mile will be reached on a great steel airfield, stretching out from the assembly end of the plant, with enough wide running runways to make a highway 22 miles long. From these runways the new bombers will make their last flight, then take off for service.

Detroit has other enormous plants, and out of them stream the...

General Marshall Sets a Goal for Stars and Stripes

A.E.F. Paper Reborn for U.S. Forces

Gen. George C. Marshall, Chief of Staff of the Army who is in the British Isles supervising United States Forces, Friday issued the following statement upon the publication of the first issue of The Stars and Stripes of 1942:

"Like any other veteran of the A.E.F. in France, I am delighted to welcome the new issue of The Stars and Stripes. By a fortunate coincidence I happen to be in the British Isles at the moment of the new publication.

"I do not believe that any one further could have done more to contain the morale of the A.E.F. than The Stars and Stripes. General Pershing of the A.E.F. was the first to see the need for a newspaper. He laid his authority for the statement that no official orders were ever received over the military wire, but that The Stars and Stripes was sent to the soldiers and the homes they had left behind across the sea. A soldier's newspaper in these great lines, it is a symbol of the things we are fighting to preserve and expand in the star-spangled world. It represents the free thought and the expression of a free people.

"I wish the staff every success in this important venture. Their responsibility includes such areas as the publication of a newspaper for the soldier. The morale in fact the military efficiency of the American soldiers in these islands, will be directly affected by the quality of The Stars and Stripes of 1942."

General Marshall, in addition to supervising United States troops in the British Isles, has been meeting with high British officials at various points of the war. He was accompanied from the United States by Harry Hopkins, who is representing the president in talks on similar matters.

Both men held a press conference shortly after their arrival April 8 and both expressed themselves so confident that the

Troops Are Getting Up As U.S. is Going to Bed

ROSWORTH, N. H. (AP)—American troops here had themselves up or were from sleep at the first light of dawn after the latest time change which took place April 5.

News Service

WASHINGTON, D.C. (AP)—The Committee for the Investigation of "Communism" is a congressional investigation committee doesn't meet.

Dear Adolf,

We know your troops will get this paper into your hands at an early date. Suppose two things: "Go-Home, Army" on Britain page 3 "Battered Spaniards" on "Opera" Page 4 "P.L. 1942" on Page 5

Conceal up in the next issue will be a story by Carl Brown on "Events in Far East War." You won't get any more copies, but if this you get from the story of United States Press from Times Magazine on Page 1 of this issue.

The Staff

P.S.—The Palumbo, Spurgeon and Pope are coming to see you soon.

Labor Peace

PITTSBURGH, PENN. (AP)—"We will stay on the job until the war is won."

This is the pledge given by the Congress of Industrial Organizations and the American Federation of Labor, Philip Murray, president of the C.I.O., and William Green, president of the A.F. of L., addressed together for the first time here recently to give the joint pledge.

Negative Cost Up

NEW YORK, N.Y. (AP)—The "negative" meaning plus and minus signs have raised their price from 1 to 12 cents.

Gen. Marshall... "We will report."

The first issue of your newspaper, the Star of a soldier weekly planned for distribution in United States service personnel in the British Isles, re-establishes The Stars and Stripes, famous publication of the American Expeditionary Force of the last war.

Permission to use the name was granted by the War Department upon request of Maj. Gen. James K. Chaney, commanding general of United States Army Forces in the British Isles.

The first issue of the original Stars and Stripes was published in Paris Feb. 4, 1918, and the anniversary on Jan. 15, 1942, at the birth of the new's operations news, which news results were distributed to troops in the trenches of France and Belgium.

The original Stars and Stripes became world-famous because of the excellence of its editing and reporting. The paper at that time was edited by the editor who, in which the reporters and editors included the experience of the greatest by knowledge and the beauty of the poems, articles and edited by Hudson Taylor, from contributions of service men.

Staff

Among the writers of that paper who later went on to fame in the same type of work after the war were Col. J. M. Gurnea, editor and publisher; Alexander Hamilton, the "Tommy Crier"; Franklin P. Adams of "Publication Service"; Homer B. MacLellan, editor and press correspondent; Douglas J. Clark, press secretary to President Roosevelt; Harley, radio executive and writer; Arthur E. Ochs, Jr., member of the famous publishing family; John T. Wadsworth, editor of "The Evening Post"; Alan A. Winters, cartoonist.

The new publication will contain many of the features popular in the original work.

News Service

The Associated Press, United Press, International News Service, Chicago Daily News, Chicago Tribune, New York Herald-Tribune, New York Times, and The Boston Herald are among the news organizations that have volunteered to supply material for the paper. King Features, McClure-Bridgman, Inc., McClure-Bridgman, Time and Life Magazines, Walcott, Columbia, and United Broadcasting systems, and Wide World and Ape also are offering their services and feature material.

News Service

News Service other agencies, including news which already were with the British Isles, are invited, while Gen. Bruce Brundage, commander of "The Better You," has accepted the position of commander and will contribute weekly.

Each Soldier, The Stars and Stripes will be distributed to personnel of the United States Armed Forces throughout the British Isles. This task will be accomplished with the cooperation of the distribution agencies and contacts of the "Stars of the West," regularly placed at the disposal of The Stars and Stripes.

The staff will operate under the Special Services section, directed by Col. E. M. Burton.
